

A simple person leading a simple life
Knows true riches;
Living her purpose,
She's not compelled to devise a complicated
And gaudy life.
At peace with her many facets,
She feels no need to wander about,
Searching for what's inside.
At home with the secrets of life,
She practically ignores them
Preferring to take life as it comes.

Delighting in a kind gesture,
A quiet moment with a friend,
She knows her sphere of influence
And fills it with light.

With the gates of heaven in her hands
She prefers to live and die right here;
For, in all the universe,
Here is where she serves.

From Tao of Healing
by Haven Treviño.